There is an undeniable intersection between abuse profiles and secret societies. In every country in the so called 'civilised world' these stories emerge and point a giant flashing neon finger at the numerous secret societies that contaminate the human condition. To the point where it has become quite clear that the survival of many of these societies is directly linked to how many broken minded psychopaths they can create.

Secret Societies Social Engineering Police Military Industrial Complex Psychology Mind Control

When sixteen year old Brenda Ann Spencer decided not to make the familiar journey across the road to school on the morning of January 29, 1979, she unusually opted to take out her hunting rifle and begin shooting at the principal and other students instead. Once she had let off thirty six rounds, killing two people and injuring eight others, she barricaded herself in the house and spoke by telephone to a journalist for the Evening Tribune. When they asked her why she had chosen to shoot at her schoolmates and teachers, she replied flatly;

> I don't like Mondays, this livens things up.

The details above come from the mainstream vanguard of Wikipedia. However the common memory of this event has been seeded by Bob Geldof and The Boomtown Rats. The song includes the inaccurate reference to Brenda Spencer taking a gun to school that day. While Brenda had been caught on school ground previously with an airgun, it's clear that Bob Geldof was seeking to portray events differently to the way they actually unfolded.This has created an image of a much younger student carrying a handgun in her schoolbag or pocket, pulling it out mid lesson and slaughtering the entire class. It's absolutely not accurate yet still it prevails. Scrutinising the motivation of Bob Geldof's lyrics begins to reveal that he was potentially pursuing an undisclosed agenda with his depiction of the scenario. This is compounded by the fact that the Cleveland Elementary school shooting is considered to be the first ever school shooting in US, and by extension - global history.

Comparing the photos of a recently apprehended teenage radical and the contemporary images of a middle aged convict, it is impossible not to perceive psychopathy in the eyes of Brenda Ann Spencer. She literally could not be any more detached. The idea that school is boring enough to justify using the school gate morning ritual to play whack-a-mole with a Ruger 10/22 semi-automatic .22 caliber rifle, is exceedingly abstract. It is also not unreasonable to suspect that there was more in play than a bored teenager experiencing a momentary psychotic episode. Brenda Spencer's father had given her the gun to (in her opinion) kill herself. The relationship between the two was marred with abuse and years of profound dysfunction in the family home.

The chances that the school principal and Brendas father were members of a secret society are actually very high. The policeman who she shot in the neck is also quite likely to have been a member of a clandestine organisation. As was the journalist she spoke to on the telephone. In fact, the most probable situation includes Brenda herself being an unwitting component in a fundamentally sinister scheme cooked up by some total whackjob neighbour that worked in local government. While it would be easy to write such extrapolations off as unfounded accusations of conspiracy, one does not have to look too hard at the multitude of successive school shootings to find compelling evidence of secret society involvement with false flag / intelligence operations.

This profoundly inhumane phenomenon extended throughout the rest of the global community. Even into countries with far more sever gun control. At this time, the average person would be able to recount mass shootings in the UK, Canada, Australia, Sweden and numerous other countries. It doesn't take Hercule Poirot to deduce what all these countries have in common. The prevalence of secret societies in all these couniires isn't even a secret anymore. Most of their leaders are members of various organisations, many of which conduct international policy strategies which have been formulated by unaccountable think tanks. The rise of the NWO in the public sector makes it practically impossible to ignore the clear association between high profile trauma in the media and the long term goals of various groups committed to widespread social engineering.

During 2018 - 2022 the global NWO psyop known as Covid19 sought to introduce unseen levels of totalitarian control over domestic populations. The single greatest delivery conduit was the intelligence community. Contrary to what many people believe, the intelligence community is much more than a selection of civil service departments with uncompelling acronyms. It is stitched into the very fabric of the entire English speaking world and well beyond. The undisclosed suspect lists and informant lists (which are basically the same) make up the vast majority of intelligence assets. They are not employees of the state and receive minimal gratuities for their clandestine activities such as gangstalking and gaslighting.

The general template rolled out to condition these people into being unpaid flunkies of the NWO, requires a distributed methodology which includes numerous delivery vectors. For clarification on these vectors, please see this article on intelligence protocols. Through a varied multitude of attacks, the target is basically brainwashed into being what has become known as a 'Manchurian Candidate'. This fractures the personality into multiple distinct personas. Combined with a set of physical attributes or disguises, the target can be more effectively managed and by extension, monetised.

Part of the brainwashing technique involves forcing the target to take on a system of abstract values. This is achieved via the platform of Stockholm syndrome. The individual is essentially a captive as a result of 24/7, 365 day surveillance. They are left with little option but to capitulate with the interpreted objectives of their captors. These objectives are always communicated through an abstract medium. Whether this is a series of literal cues delivered using ciphers or a signal utilising an unaccountable medium, it will always be communicated with a view to holding reward or punishment. This Pavlovs Dogs mode of acclimation creates a mindset of identifying with the goals and philosophies of their kidnappers. Once this has been established, the captors can be substituted for other 'handlers'. A financial product has been created and as such becomes an opportunity for multiple individuals to associate with or control a specific persona in the collection of splinters that used to be a single personality.

It is possible, or in fact quite probable, that Brenda Ann Spencer was exhibiting behaviour associated with the process described above. In the article Astral Hypervisors and the rise of the telecommuter we covered the suicide of Diego Barajas Medina. He would appear to have chosen to kill himself rather than engage in the firing of automatic weapons at theme park visitors. While this is certainly not the most recent active shooter related event in the United States, it does feature hallmarks of the psychological conditioning of the subject(s). Furthermore there would appear to be an evolution of the method template. Brenda Ann Spencer was a radical femme in civilian clothing. Diego Barajas Medina appeared to be a mercenary of some kind dressed in tactical clothing with patches that denoted a police or military connection.

It has been claimed by many that Charles Manson was an intelligence asset. This is in no way a ridiculous narrative and has more than a thread of plausibility. Across the Atlantic in the UK home of Freemasonry there have also been horrific acts of violence and depravity waged against the civilian population by miscreant predators who appear to have been assisted by convenient failures in policing or intelligence. The list is literally too long to express in writing. From the most bizarre of anecdotal evidence such as the attacks by Springheeled Jack to the completely abhorrent details of criminal syndicates and their treatment of humans as livestock. At the root of it all, is the widespread promotion and deployment of an applied schizophrenic method.

The proof of this horrific wrong turn in the development of humanity can be seen currently in the treatment of the online social media individuals known as TI's. These people are being targeted by unaccountable facets of the state in order to provide busy work and also the opportunity for siphoning tax dollars out of the treasury. It suits a cult of revisionism to have any conscientious individuals out of the way while they attempt to roll out their psychopathic goals. It happened in the 1930's with the Thousand Year Reich and the Axis of Evil and it's happening now with the New World Order. The main difference being that in the early 20th century, we did not inhabit a global society. The vast majority of people didn't even leave their home country, never mind regularly communicate with people in other time zones.

While the utterly insane goals of the Nazi's targeted intellectuals, poets, authors, homosexuals, disabled people and gypsies, the NWO targets the conscientious, the virtuous and those who qualify as being more able than their peers. To make matters worse, their reach is global.

There is a presence of the cult of revisionism in every single society on Earth. It is the trusted partner of the NWO secret societies and also an integral part of all municipal systems.
